A brief introduction of Distributive Trade Survey, 2065

Trade is one of the vital components of an economy. It can be classified into two groups – domestic and foreign trade. Domestic trade which is also known as internal trade comprises wholesale and retail trade including other trading activities. Wholesale and retail trade on goods has significant contribution to an economy. In this context, the distributive trade survey, 2065 with an aim of studying on wholesale and retail trade of goods is going to be conducted for the first time in Nepal.

The main objective of carrying out trade survey, 2065 is to estimate trade margin ratio, employment, wages and salaries, change of inventories and other economic transactions occurred in this sector. The output of the survey provides a basis to the government for improving its trade and commercial policy timely. Furthermore, the results of the survey are also expected to be useful for planner, policy maker, researcher, trader and entrepreneur and other stakeholders to assess the prevailing challenges and opportunities in the trade sector.

Points to be considered while filling up a questionnaire

1. The Reference Year for the survey is from Shrawan 1, 2064 to Asar 30, 2065 (a period of Nepali Fiscal Year 2064/2065). Questionnaire is to be filled up with reference to this period.
2. Information on employment is to be collected based on personnel working at the day of enumeration. If any person is on leave at the day of enumeration, that person should also be recorded as a person working in the establishment.
3. Every box should not be empty in the questionnaire except the boxes designated for official purposes. The sign “X” is to be recorded for any not applicable data item and the sign “0” should be recorded for any zero price or quantity or number. Nepali letters and number are to be used while filling the questionnaire except for asking to write in English in the questionnaire.
