*Level of presentation: India / State / District / City
New Table in 2001 Census*

This appendix table gives the distribution of households by condition of census houses where they live. The census houses used as residence and residence-cum-other use are classified here by their livable condition such as good, livable and dilapidated. The information on condition of census houses shown as good, livable and dilapidated is based on the perception of the respondent. The response and thereby the product in this table is qualitative in nature and therefore to an extent there is an element of subjectivity. The institutional households are not included for the presentation of data in this table, as this question was not canvassed for them. The data in this appendix table are presented for total, rural and urban areas separately.

City level data will be available only in electronic format.
