Step 1: The sample was drawn according to the method of Probability Sampling, Population Proportionate to Size (PPS). Pakistan was divided into 4 provinces. Every province was representative of its actual proportion in the total population.

Step 2: The distribution between urban and rural was also proportionate to its proportion as per last census, and re-weighted accordingly in the tabulated results.

Step 3: Within the districts villages and urban circles were selected according to random sampling procedure.

Step 4: Within selected villages or an urban circle a Household was selected randomly after a start on random walk and proceeding according to a standardized interval.

Step 5: Within each Household respondent was selected through KISH method.

Step 6: Households with a designated interval was contacted by using “Right hand Rule” technique
