PRIORITY TABLE Volume VIII

POPULATION DISTRIBUTION BY SEX & TYPES OF HOUSEHOLD

(STATE & Local Government Area)

Table HH1

Abuja, Nigeria
April, 2010

Preface

The enumeration of persons during the 2006 Population and Housing Census took place in the respective households in which the respondents normally reside. A household consists of a person or group of persons living together usually under the same roof or in the same building / compound, who share the same source of food and recognize themselves as a social unit with a head of household. However the households canvassed during the 2006 Census exhibit variations not only in class size but also the structure and composition. As it is consistent with best global practices, the National Population Commission captured, processed and disseminated information on the households canvassed in the 2006 Census.

This publication presents data on the types of households enumerated during the 2006 Census and the data has been presented for the states and the FCT and all the Local Government Areas of the federation. No doubt the highest numbers of people stay in regular households but there are other households as well such as the institutional households, homeless households, homeless persons, nomadic households, transient persons and households, fishing and hunting households as well as census functionaries.

The distribution of household types in a population tells important story about the social system, the economic conditions of the people and the socialization process. This data will be useful for planners in the social welfare sector, law enforcement, and indeed any other planners interested in how the people live. It is my hope that planners will find this volume as well as the other two volumes on the Class Size of the Population and Relationship to Heads of Household useful in trying to understand how the people live, where they live and how they do so.

The Commission wishes to thank individuals, states and local governments as well as the Development Partners who all contributed to the successful conduct of the 2006 Census.

Chief Samu'ila Danko Makama CON

Chairman

National Population Commission

Notes

This section provides information on the arrangement of this publication and explanation of some concepts used.

This volume presents data on the population distribution by types of household as canvassed in the 2006 Census. This volume contains tables on the Distribution of Population by types of households for all states and the FCT arranged in alphabetical order. Under each state, the corresponding tables for the Local Government Areas are presented.

Find below explanations of some of the concepts used in this publication:

Regular households – A regular household consists of a person or group of persons living together usually under the same roof or in the same building / compound, who share the same source of food and recognize themselves as a social unit with a head of household.

Institutional Households –

Homeless persons – Homeless persons include beggars, vagrants and lunatics who are usually found in public places such as bridges, parks and market places

Homeless households – Homeless persons are identical to regular households except that they have no fixed place of abode

Nomadic households – These are persons or households who migrate from place to place in search of pasture for their animals. Nomads do not settle in any place for longer than one or two years.

Transient persons – Transient population refers to persons or households that are not likely to return to a regular or institutional household within the enumeration period. They include persons or households that were on the move and could not be assigned to any specific building

Fishing and hunting households – These are households who spend days on water or in the bush for their occupation and can therefore not be enumerated in their respective households

Census functionaries - Census functionaries were persons who had to leave their respective places of residence for assignments during the conduct of the 2006 Census
