I - INTRODUCTION

Panel data possess several advantages over conventional cross-sectional and time-series data, including their power to isolate the effects of specific actions, treatments, and general policies often at the core of large-scale econometric development studies. While the concept of panel data alone provides the capacity for modeling the complexities of human behavior, the notion of universal panel data - in which time- and situation-driven variances leading to variations in tools, and thus results, are mitigated - can further enhance exploitation of the richness of panel information.

This Basic Information Document (BID) provides a brief overview of the Nigerian General Household Survey (GHS) but focuses primarily on the theoretical development and application of panel data, as well as key elements of the universal panel survey instrument and datasets generated by the four rounds of the GHS. As this BID does not describe in detail the background, development, or use of the GHS itself, the wave-specific GHS BIDs should supplement the information provided here.

The Nigeria Universal Panel Data (NUPD) consists of both survey instruments and datasets from the two survey visits of the GHS - Post-Planting (PP) and Post-Harvest (PH) - meticulously aligned and engineered with the aim of facilitating the use of and improving access to the wealth of panel data offered by the GHS. The NUPD provides a consistent and straightforward means of conducting user-driven analyses using convenient, standardized tools.

The design of the NUPD combines the four completed Waves of the GHS Household Post-Planting and Post-Harvest Surveys - Wave 1 (2010/11), Wave 2 (2012/13), Wave 3 (2015/16), and Wave 4 (2018/19) - into pooled, module-specific survey instruments and datasets. The panel survey instruments offer the ease of comparability over time, with modifications and variances easily identifiable as well as those aspects of the questionnaire which have remained identical and offer consistent information. By providing all module-specific data over time within compact, pooled datasets, panel datasets eliminate the need for user-generated merges between rounds and present data in a clear, logical format, increasing both the usability and comprehension of complex data.

II - Background

GHS-Panel Household Surveys - Post-Planting and Post-Harvest: The Household Survey collects information on demographics, education, health, child immunization and development, labor and time use, food consumption and non-food expenditure, household nonfarm income generating activities, food security and shocks, conflicts, deaths, safety nets, housing conditions, asset sales and acquisition, remittances, attitudes, behavior, information and communication technology, and other sources of household income.

The Household Questionnaire is slightly different for the two visits. Some information was collected only in the post-planting visit, some only in the post-harvest visit, and some in both visits.

B. Table 2: GHS - Household Post-Harvest Waves and Dates

WAVE	VISITS	GHS	DATES
1	POST- HARVEST	GHS - 2010/2011	February / March 2011
2	POST- HARVEST	GHS - 2012/2013	February / March 2013
3	POST- HARVEST	GHS - 2015/2016	February / March 2016
4	POST- HARVEST	GHS - 2018/2019	January / February 2019

As a panel household survey in which the same households are revisited over time, the GHS allows for the study of poverty and welfare transitions and the determinants of living standard changes. The survey instruments and datasets for the NUPD were generated following completion of the GHS 2018/19, after recognizing the value and vast quantity of the data available and the need for easily accessible and usable datasets to measure such determinants.

III - OVERVIEW

The NUPD consists of a universal panel survey instrument and universal panel datasets, presented by module and in a format similar to previously released wave-specific GHS products. This document describes fundamental elements of the NUPD, including information on Survey Instruments (Section IV), Datasets (Section V), and Module-Specific Information (Section VI). Please see the GHS BIDs for each round for detailed descriptions of the sample design used in each round and their respective implementation efforts. Sample design information pertinent to the use and comprehension of the NUPD data sets is summarized in Section VI of this document.

IV - Survey Instrument:

A - Universal Questionnaire Development

The NUPD survey instrument was developed to highlight the similarities and examine the comparability of both questions and response codes across waves and allows for easy identification of information reported in all waves of the GHS. The NUPD survey instrument includes 26 module-specific questionnaires for Post-Planting visits and 17 module-specific questionnaires for Post-Harvest visits which correlate directly to the NUPD datasets in terms of module names, variable names, variable labels, and response codes.

B - Questionnaire Layout

The format of the NUPD survey instrument is similar to previously disseminated GHS survey instruments. Each module has a questionnaire and clearly identifies if the module collects information at the individual or household level. Within each module-specific questionnaire of the NUPD survey instrument, there are four distinct sections, arranged vertically on the NUPD survey instrument: “U” the UPD, W4, W3, W2, and W1 - the latter four sections presenting each questionnaire in its original form at time of its respective dissemination.

The uppermost section of each module’s questionnaire (“U”) presents the model universal panel questionnaire, with questions generated from the comprehensive listing of questions across all four waves of the GHS and codes generated from the comprehensive collection of codes. The following sections are arranged vertically by wave, considering W4 as most recent, though this depends on the module covered in each wave. While not all waves will have data reported for each question in the UPD and not each question will have reports for each of the UPD codes listed, the NUPD survey instrument represents the visual, all-inclusive set of information collected by the GHS over time.

The four wave-specific sections (W4, W3, W2, W1) are aligned with their UPD-equivalent question, visually presenting their contribution to compatibility with the UPD. Each wave-specific section includes the original wave-specific questions, variable names, response codes and skip patterns (corresponding to their respective wave-specific NUPD datasets, and despite their variance from other waves or from the comprehensive UPD code listing)<sup>1</sup>.

C - Variable Names

Variable names for NUPD questions were assigned following the comprehensive listing of questions from all four waves within each particular module and used the naming convention defined in Table 3. Therefore, the UPD variable name will not always match the original wave-specific variable name.

Moreover, those questions that seem to be identical, but the response options are either single select or multi-select across waves, are presented as two questions in UPD.

Table 3: NUPD Variable Naming Convention

EXAMPLE 1: No Subset	EXAMPLE 2: Subset Question	EXAMPLE 3: Multi-responses
Variable Name: ha_02	Variable Name: hc_27a	Variable Name: hd_14_0
where h = household a = module A _02 = question # two	where h = household c = module C 27 = question # twenty-seven a = subset of Q27	where h = household d = module D 14 = question # fourteen _0 = multi-response of Q14

<sup>1</sup> Skip patterns within the wave specific sections of questionnaires are directed to the variable name of the UPD to facilitate ease of direction, as more complicated modules often cannot maintain the conventional numerical order of variables within each of the round (W4 is again considered most recent and therefore is best preserved as the conventional structure).

D - Response Codes

Response codes for each UPD question were generated from the comprehensive listing of response codes from all four GHS waves for that particular question. Similar to the variable naming structure, since response code values for the UPQ questions were reassigned following this comprehensive listing they will not necessarily correspond to each original wave-specific response code value. The UPD code listings intend to present the all-inclusive set of information gathered at any point in time by the GHS.

E - Changes in Questions Over Rounds

Identical Questions: Whenever possible, questions that are identical or nearly identical across rounds (i.e. “What kind of toilet facility do members of your household generally use?” and “What is the main toilet facilities usually used in this household?”) are presented as a single, unified UPD question. These will be vertically aligned in the module’s questionnaire. Minor changes in question wording that are not anticipated to affect interpretation or results are noted as footnotes, but the slight variations will not be presented as unique UPD questions.

Distinct Variations of Questions: When a question is considerably different across waves (i.e. “What measures does this household take to ensure the safety of drinking water?” and “What do you usually do to the water to make it safer to drink in the dry season?”), all variations of the question will be included in the UPD questionnaire with the appropriate blackouts for the respective rounds that the UPD question is not present in. For these cases, it will be up to the user’s discretion to combine.

Prevalence of Questions: Whether a question exists in some or all of the four NUP waves, it will be included in the UPD questionnaire and will either have the respective wave-specific variables presented below it, or will have the appropriate blackouts for the respective waves that the question is not present in.

V - DATASETS

The NUP datasets were developed in accordance with the UPD survey instrument and aim to neatly present and facilitate the use of the wealth of panel data collected by the GHS. By offering compact, standardized data sets, data are readily available and pre-standardized for optimal panel analyses.

The design of the universal panel datasets combines the four waves of GHS data - GHS 2010/11 (W1), GHS 2012/13 (W2), GHS 2015/16 (W3), and GHS 2018/19 (W4) - into pooled, module-specific data sets. The NUPD consists of a total of 43 data files in Post-Planting and Post-Harvest visits, each pertaining to a single module or portion of the module (i.e. “NUP_PP_MOD_A_B.dta” and “NUP_PH_MOD_Flap_A_Roster_B.dta”). Each data file will include data for all waves that reported information on that module. The complete set of data files, as well as the level of observation, unique identifier for that module (within each wave), and waves of data included, are described in the tables of Section VI & VII.

Merging Datasets

In the merging process, all waves of household datasets in both the post-planting and post-harvest files contain a variable name hhid, which is a unique identifier for the household-level data collection. This variable is used as the unique variable in the merging of all household-level datasets. In the case of individual-level datasets, the variable that uniquely identifies the individual within the household is indiv. So, in order to merge any two individual-level datasets, both the hhid and indiv variables would be used.
