Questionnaire:

The questionnaire was translated into ten Indian languages by a specialist translator. A few modifications were undertaken in response categories for the scale answer questions. It was then back-translated to English. For each of the 10 languages the pre test was done on a sample of 5 each. There were several concepts and questions difficult to translate: more specifically v75/v76/v103/v175/v208/v212/v229/. These problems were solved by developing new phrases close to the original statement or using it in the context of social reality The sample was designed to be representative of the entire adult population, i.e. 18 years and older, of your country. The lower age cut-off for the sample was 18 and there was not any upper age cut-off for the sample.

Sample:

As part of the India component of the World Values Survey, it was decided to conduct 2000 face-to-face interviews. A rigorous scientific method was employed to generate the target sample for the study. The survey was conducted in 18 states of India, which covered nearly 97 % of the nations population. 40 districts in the country were identified for the purpose of the survey (a little less than 1/10 of the districts in the country: 466 districts as per 1991 census). The 40 districts were spread across the 18 states, in which the survey was conducted keeping in mind the population of the states, even while ensuring that the survey was conducted in at least one district in each of the sampled states. Within each state, the district/s in which the survey was to be conducted was selected by circular sampling (PPS: Probability Proportion to Size). Once all the 40 districts were selected, the Lok Sabha (Lower House of the Indian Parliament) constituency that covered the district was identified. If the sampled district had more than one Lok Sabha constituency, the one, which had a larger proportion of the districts electorate, was selected. The next stage in the sampling process was the selection of 2 State Assembly (Lower House of the State Legislature) constituencies in each of the sampled 40 Lok Sabha constituencies. Circular Sampling (PPS: Probability Proportion to Size) was once again employed. Thus, 80 Assembly Constituencies in 40 Lok Sabha constituencies (in 40 districts) were selected. Subsequently, a polling booth area in each of the 80 sampled Assembly constituencies was selected by simple circular sampling method. The number of respondents to be interviewed in each state was determined on the basis of the proportion of the states share in the national population. This was equally divided among the polling booth areas that were sampled in a state. The number of respondents in the polling booth area was the same within a state, but varied from state to state. In a polling booth area, the respondents were selected from the electoral rolls (voters list) by circular sampling with a random first number. While drawing up the random list of respondents to be interviewed in every sampled polling booth area, the number of target respondents was increased by nearly 20 %. This was done in view of the fact that the field investigators were required to interview only those respondents whose names were included in the sample list. No replacements or alteration in the list of sampled respondents was permitted. Previous survey experience has shown that it has never been possible for the investigator to interview all those included in the list of sampled respondents. A wide range of factors is responsible for the same. The investigators were told to make every effort to interview all those included in the list of respondents. In the event of the investigator not being able to complete an interview, they were asked to record the reason for the same. Such a rigorous method of sampling was followed in order to obtain as representative a national sample as possible. The analysis of the sample profile clearly indicates that the detailed and objective criteria employed has eminently served its purpose as the sample mirrors the nations social, economic, political, cultural and religious diversity.

Remarks about sampling:

-Final numbers of clusters or sampling points: No clusters -Sample unit from office sampling: Named individual

Survey procedure:

Personal Face to Face Interview

Fieldwork:

The fieldwork was done by the Department of Political Science, Bangalore, India. The survey was conducted in 40 survey areas. For each survey area an investigator was sent and asked to complete a specified number of interviews which were in the 40 to 60 range. All investigators were paid the same amount. Calls were made at different times of day. The investigators were asked to make as many calls as was permissible in the time they were in the survey area. 10 % of interviews were randomly checked by the State coordinators.

Response rate:

The following table presents completion rate results: -Total number of starting names/addresses 2354 -Addresses which could not be traced at all 56 -Addresses established as empty, demolished or containing no private dwellings 39 -Selected respondent too sick/incapacitated to participate 29 - Selected respondent away during survey period 62 -Selected respondent had inadequate understanding of language of survey 27 -No contact at selected address 76 -No contact with selected person 31 -Refusal at selected address 34 -Full productive interviews 2002.
